About Franc Robert

Biography

First picking up the guitar in 1980, Franc started playing electric blues and rock in bands, but always dug deeper to find the roots of the music he was playing. His road of discovery led him to Robert Johnson and his 29 recordings, and brought him to the world of 1930s rural Mississippi, with its juke joints, fish fries, and Delta Blues. Diving further into the music, Franc started playing occasional solo acoustic blues gigs in Montreal around 1987, alongside his band shows. Moving to Florida in 1990, Franc started finding his writing voice, and has since released a string of records which always included at least one acoustic blues tune.

2011's Why Do I Never Win topped the MusicTampaBay.com play chart and reached #3 on the Roots Music Report Florida chart, and featured 6 acoustic originals which Franc frequently plays in his solo show. 2012 brought Mulligan Stew which went to #22 on the Roots Music Report National Blues Chart, and #1 on the Florida chart. "Ride e Iron Road" was released on April 15, 2014 to much acclaim world-wide. In 2015, Franc returned to the studio with the band to record “Goin Down To Florida” which received extensive airplay and rave reviews worldwide.
